MR. W. S. PEARSE.

A private cablegram received at Fremantle announced the death, of Mr. Wm. Silas Pearse, at his residence, Drayton, Clifton, Bristol, England. The deceased was a brother of Mr. Jas. Pearse and of Mr. F. Pearse, of North Fremantle, and & son of the late Mr. W. Pearse, one of the earliest colonists, who landed here in foundation year 1829, and settled at Fremantle. The latter gentleman married a daughter of the late Mr. Geo. Glyde, of Perth, and left a large family, of whom the deceased, Wm. S. Pearse, was the eldest. Born as far back as 1838 at the North Shore, Fremantle, the deceased entered the arena of public life at an early age, being a member of the Fremantle Town Trust before Fremantle was declared a municipality, in 1879, when he was elected the first chairman. The deceased was also during the early eighties a member for Fremantle in the old Legislative Council, and was the first representative of North Fremantle in the first Western Australian Parliament under Responsible Government. For many years he was engaged in business with his brother, Mr. Geo. Pearse, and subsequently he was associated with the late Captain Owston and the late Mr. W. Marmion. Some ten years ago the deceased gentleman took up his residence in the old land, and as in the past took an active interest in the advancement of this State. Well known throughout Western Australia he was highly esteemed for his sterling qualities in social and business circles, and the news of his demise will be received by his many friends with deepest regret.

Pearse Bros., and North Fremantle are synonymous, and the firm's reputation for best quality footwear of all descriptions has always stood high. The main members of the firm's executives were born in North Fremantle, where the tannery was founded on its present site, on the banks of Swan River in 1868. Established by the late Messrs. George Pearse and William Silas Pearse, the firm at first carried on only a tanning business, it being some years before a start was made with the manufacture of boots and shoes. Later Mr. James Pearse took over the control of the undertaking, and his sons, Messrs. A. G., S. P. and L. K. Pearse are the present directors. Wherever practicable local products are used in the factory. Hides are secured from all parts of the State, West Australian mallet bark is used to tan them and most other supplies are drawn from local resources. The company has a big advantage in doing its own tanning and as a result has a continuous supply of leather of regular quality always available.

Military Importance

This facility proved of special benefit during the war years, when the firm executed a number of orders for the military authorities, making in the vicinity of 100,000 pairs of military boots for Australian soldiers. Its activity in this sphere proved a splendid advertisement for this firm which today sells many boots of the same type, to farmer, miners, stockmen and others, who made their first acquaintance with the company's products during the war period. All classes of footwear are manufactured by the company, which in addition to catering for a big local market, sends supplies to customers in Adelaide, Melbourne and

Sydney. At the present time the firm employs about 200 hands, and the annual wages bill is in the vicinity of £15,000. The factory and tannery covers between three and four acres of land and the up-to-date machinery installed ensures high-quality goods. The plant is capable of producing more than 3000 pair of footwear per week. The latest addition to the plant, an embossing machine for use in ironing and finishing off the leather, was recently landed from Great Britain and installed in the tannery.

Obituary

THE LATE MR, GEORGE PEARSE, By the death of Mr. George Pearse, senr., Fremantle has lost one of its most respected and oldest citizens, he having been born in the northern suburb 74 years ago. The long funeral cortege moved from his late residence, 'Lilburn,' Queen-street, Fremantle, and proceeded to St. John's Church, where a service was conducted by the Rev. Canon R. H, Moore,. assisted by the Rev. E. S, Clairs, In the course of an address, the Canon mentioned that it is given to few to live to old age, and to enter into rest with riches and honor, Many, toil and have little reward. Few again who have attained wealth and ease remember the Giver of all good things. Mr. Pearse was born while the old church was being built, and was a member of the first committee for the building of the new, which was just 48 years ago. Of recent years he was too feeble to take any active part, but he was always most ready and willing to help spontaneously, and during his last days his chief interest was to watch the work progress. He has gone to rest, but he leaves an example to young men, for one who has given time to the service of God, who in his old age found peace and solace in his simple faith, May he rest in peace, and may the light perpetual shine upon him. After the service, which concluded with the singing of the hymn, Lead Kindly Light, the funeral .proceeded to the Fremantle

WEDDINGS.

CARTER-PEARSE.

Considerable interest was aroused in a wedding at the Beaconsfield Congregational Church on the 3rd inst., the happy couple being Mr. Percy Milton Carter, of Dongarra, second son of Mr. Charles Carter, Tarrings-ring, Camberwell, Vic-toria, and Miss Florence Edith Pearse, eldest surviving daughter of Mr. Samuel Pearse, of Beaconsfield. Western Australia. The church-was tastefully decorated with lilies, marguerite daisies, and green leaves, interspersed with true lovers'-knots, while over the bridal party hung a large and beautiful wedding bell. The bride looked very charming in a cream silk voile frock, the bodice of which was made with a brass-stitched yoke, handkerchief sleeves, and trimmed with chiffon to the waist : the skirt, very deeply frilled with small frills of the ma-terial, was also brass-stitched, yoked, with handsome train. The whole costume was finished with a beautifully-em-broidered wedding veil, falling over a coronet of orange-blossom. The bride carried a beautiful shower bouquet of white roses, carnations, and fern, and wore a gold diamond and ruby bangle, the gift of the bridegroom. The bridesmaid, Miss A. Pearse, sister of the bride, wore a pretty costume of cream silk, the bodice made with shirred yoke, trimmed with insertion, the silk falling loosely to the waist, the sleeves shirred to the elbow, and gathered into a band of insertion at the wrist ; the skirt, with shirred yoke, was finished with shirred flounce and trimmed with insertion. The bridesmaid carried a lovely shower bouquet of pink and white roses, and wore a gold diamond and ruby brooch, the gift of the bridegroom. Mr. James Pearse, of Fremantle, uncle of the bride, gave her away. The Rev. Thomas Ma-guire, B.A.. performed the ceremony, which was appropriately closed with the "Wedding March." played on the beau-tiful organ which the Beaconsfield Church has lately imported from Ame-rica. After the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the invited guests par-took of the good things provided. The happy couple took the 7 p.m. train for Woodbridge, where the honeymoon was spent. The presents were very numeous.

THE LATE MR. FRANCIS PEARSE

By the death of Mr. Francis Pearse another member of an old pioneer family of this State has gone to rest. Mr. Pearse passed away on the 1st instant at Fremantle in his 73rd year. He was born at that town, and was well known and respected in the district. After his education was completed he joined the firm of Messrs. T. and H Carter, merchants, Fremantle, and at the age of 21 years he was sent by his employers to open up a branch at Dongara. He worked so energetically that in a few years he became a partner, and later acquired the Dongara business himself. The deceased gentleman then took up land on the Murchison, and was the proprietor of some of the best sheep stations in that famous district, Mr. Pearse resided at Dongarra for 34 years, and during that period he was chairman of the Irwin Road Board for upwards of ten years. He was also a justice of the peace for the whole State. In 1870 he married Miss Snook, second daughter of the late Mr. John Snook, an old resident and pioneer of this State. During the last 16 years he had lived a retired life at his home, 'Hillcrest,' North Fremantle. A widow and a grown-up family of two sons and four daughters and 12 grandchildren survive him. His second son, Nelson, was unable to attend the funeral on account of his being 500 miles away on Nalbarra Station, which is cut off from communication. The funeral cortege moved from 'Hillcrest,' Harvest-road, North Fremantle, on Tuesday afternoon, the 4th instant, and proceeded to the Congregational Cemetery, Karrakatta, where the remains were interred. The Rev. W. L. Williams conducted a brief service at the residence and also officiated, at the graveside, where he was assisted by the Rev. Corly Butler in the presence of a large gathering of relatives and old acquaintances. The chief mourners were Mr. Newman Pearse (son), Mr. James Pearse (brother), Messrs. W. Mitchell and D. M. PASSING OF PIONEERS.

The Late Mrs. E. A. Pearse.

Mrs. Emma Anne Pearse, whose death at the age of 84 years was announced in yesterday's issue of "The West Aus-tralian," was one of the outstanding, as certainly she was one of the most widely revered, of West Australian women. The evidences in the community of her philanthropic activities constitute for her an enduring memorial. Mrs. Pearse early learnt to do good. The few surviving contemporaries of her girlhood, which was spent in Fremantle, and the people of Dongarra and the Irwin district, in which she settled with her husband, Mr. Francis Pearse, over 60 years ago, and where she raised a large family, could testify to her many social services and to her unostentatious acts of charity. When, following on her marriage in 1870, she went to reside at Dongarra, the Victoria and Irwin districts were among the outposts of settlement. A journey from Dongarra to the city, 240 miles distant, if made overland, had to be made on horseback, and if by sea, then only at long and irregular intervals, and on small sailing vessels making no pretensions to cater for the comfort of their few passengers. During the period of her residence at Dongarra, from 1870 to 1903, when Mr. Pearse retired from business, Mrs. Pearse endeared herself to the residents of the district by her practical sympathy with them in their trials and difficulties. In the meantime she saw great changes in the district. Geraldton had become a leading outport of the State, the pastoral, agricultural and gold mining industries had, greatly developed, and with their development her husband's business concur rently prospered. Mr. Pearse retired in 1903, and from that time to the date of his death resided at his well-known residence, Hillcrest, North Fremantle. Following his death. Mrs. Pearse devoted herself to acts of philanthropy. Hardly can there be a charitable institution which was not, at one time or another, the object of her bounty. The Children's Hospital, the Home of Peace, the Institute for the Blind, the Lady Lawley Cottage by the Sea, the Salvation Army, and many other charitable institutions benefited by her repeated benefactions. On the death of her husband Mrs. Pearse acquired from the ad ministrators of his estate the beautiful family residence of Hillcrest, together with its extensive grounds, and this fine property she gave free of encumbrances to the Salvation Army, to be used as a maternity hospital. To the cost of adapting Hillcrest to this purpose and of equipping it Mrs. Pearse also made generous contribution. At the funeral at Karrakatta yesterday the chief mourners were Messrs. Newman and Nelson Pearse (sons), Keith Mitchell, Colin and Ronald Pearse (grandsons), Charles Hudson (brother-in-law), A. P. Hamilton, A. Turton, P. Milton Carter, A. G. L. K., S. R., and G. E. Pearse, M. J. and A. Bateman, C. A. Hudson. C. J. and S. J. Snook, and H. A. Herbert (nephew) Mrs. C. J. Snook (niece) and G. S. Pearse and D. K. and. A. G. Turton (grand-nephews). The pall-bearers were Sir James Mitchell, Dr. H. J. Lotz, Messrs. Harry Hale, F. E. Wingrove, Horace Jones, I. C; Burges, S. J. Watson, and Leo Gillies. Among those present were Rev. Jas. Adamson, Rev A. J. Barclay (Methodist Church), Dr. F. H. Vincent, Brigadier V. W. Ede, Major Winifred Horsley (Salvation Army, women's social depart-ment) and Major Lilian Swadling (matron of Hillcrest, Salvation Army); Messrs. J. J. Holmes, M.LC., Horace J. Notes for James Glyde Pearse:

Western Mail (Perth, WA : 1885 - 1954), Thursday 20 January 1921, page 34 OLD TIME MEMORIES. (By Hugh Kalyptus.)

By the death of Mr. James Pearse, who was an ex-Mayor of North Fremantle and one of the State's senior honorary magistrates, the last of the five sons of the original Pearse family has passed away. The name of Pearse is synonymous with the history of Fremantle, where Mr. and Mrs. Pearse, senior, landed during the early thirties. Of their family, of five sons and three daughters, only Mrs. Lawrence Henderson and Mrs. Frank Bateman survive; Mrs. Thomas Corrigan, the eldest daughter of the Pearse family, whose husband was a member of the staff of the Fremantle "Herald," of the seventies, having died a few months ago. The late James Pearse, with his brothers Silas and George, inaugurated the tanning and boot business of Pearse Brothers, at North Fremantle, during the seventies, in the activities of which he was identified up to the time of his death. Mrs. Pearse, senior, was a member of the original Glyde family, who arrived at Fremantle by the old London liner Rockingham in the year 1830. For many years the brothers Silas and George Pearse traded as butchers, pastoralists and shipowners, under the style of W. S. and G. Pearse. In their shipping department, during the sixties and the seventies they were associated with the late Captain William Owston, in the ownership of the barque Eliza Blanche (Captain John Hen-fry) and, with the late William Edward Marmion (Fremantle's noblest son), in the ownership of the clipper barque Amur and several schooners. The hull of the Amur, which her owner (Captain Watson) sailed from London to Fremantle and sold to Messrs Pearse and Marmion for £2,000, is now on the foreshore between Clarence and Rockingham, within a few miles of the remains of that vessel's original owner, who as one of the passengers in Chipper's red-and-yellow mail van to Albany, en route to London, by steamer, from that port, strayed into the bush between the 36-mile police station and the Williams, and was never afterwards seen alive; his remains being found by the police and buried in the East Perth cemetery. Aided by their shipping interests, the firm of Pearse and Marmion were among the State's earliest pioneers in opening up the Nor-West settlements, their smart schooner Mary (in charge of Robert Owen said, afterwards, Peter Littlejohn) having assisted the Amur (Captain Henry O'Grady) in conveying stock and provisions to those far distant localities and returning to Fremantle with mails, wool, pearls, and pearlshell for transshipment to the European markets. During one of the Amur's voyages to Wyndham she conveyed the members of the Forrest survey party, at the head of which was the late Lord Forrest.

He was born on 25-Nov-1879⁹¹.

Notes for Mena Hallet (Hally) Pearse:

Australian Women's Register (<https://nla.gov.au/nla.party-1624799>)

Hally Kienzle was living in Fiji with her German-born husband when war broke out in 1914. Although her husband was a naturalised British subject, he and his family were deported to Australia for internment as enemy aliens. From October 1917 they were interned in the Bourke Concentration Camp before they were transferred to the Molonglo Concentration Camp in May 1918. Hally was released on parole on 29 May 1919 while her husband was imprisoned in Holsworthy Camp until 22 October 1919.

Fourth generation Australian, Mena Hallett 'Hally' Pearse was the second of ten children, born to Jessie Alice (nee Armstrong) and James Pearse in Fremantle, Western Australia on 3 April 1879. James Pearse was a prominent businessman whose shoe manufacturing business, later known as Pearse and Swan, became a major company in Western Australia. He served as a councillor for Fremantle 1883-1895, for North Fremantle 1895-1917 and as Mayor of North Fremantle from 1898-1901.

On 11 September 1915, Hally married German-born Alfred Thomas Karl Kienzle at the Anglican Church, Levuka, Fiji. Alfred's first wife had died soon after childbirth in 1914 leaving him with four young children - baby Wallace born in 1914, Elsa born in 1910, Laura born in 1907 and Herbert 'Bert' Thomson Kienzle born in 1905. During World War Two Bert became known as the 'architect of Kokoda' after establishing the legendary Kokoda Trail, a crucial transport route in Papua New Guinea, enabling the transport of food, munitions and medical supplies to Australian troops. Alfred, from Stuttgart, managed German-owned Hedeman & Evers, exporters of copra and sugar, in Levuka. He had been a naturalised British subject since 7 June 1902, but in the growing anti-German sentiment in British colonies, naturalisation neither provided protection nor was considered to guarantee loyalty to Britain. Australia willingly imprisoned people from the Pacific, Asia and Africa considered enemy aliens because of their places of birth, possibly because of concerns about German expansion in the Pacific as much as concerns about loyalty. Suspected of having pronounced German sympathies because of an incident in which he knocked a picture of King George off the wall, by his account accidentally, Alfred was arrested and deported to Australia in May 1916 with the first shipment of enemy aliens, and interned at Trial Bay, New South Wales, the camp for the elite - merchants, naval officers, physicians, priests, university lecturers and German consuls. From 20 November 1916, Alfred appealed on several grounds to the Governor of Fiji, the Governor-General of Australia, the Minister for Defence, the British Secretary of State for the Colonies in London, and Justice John Musgrave Harvey who was the Official Visitor to Prisoner of War Internment Camps. The appeals included one on the ground of ill health which he attributed to his treatment when initially interned and for which he required surgery. After a Court of Inquiry did not uphold his complaint he requested to be sent to England as a British subject to appeal his case before the Privy Council. Another appeal concerned his deportation from Fiji and the liquidation of his business and sale of his assets, including the family home, in Fiji. None were successful and in October 1917 Hally and the four Kienzle children were also deported from Fiji to Australia, despite the fact that they were all natural-born British subjects. Hally's sister, Daisy Schoeffel who was married to Kienzle's cousin, was deported at the same time with her two children. Both Hally and Daisy believed they were being removed from Fiji for their own protection because of the increasing anti-German sentiment among the European population in Fiji, however on arrival in Sydney they were heavily guarded and were not permitted communication with Australian relatives or friends. They were transported to Bourke Concentration Camp, New South Wales, a camp which included many families. There Hally requested to be interned with her husband, as did Daisy Schoeffel. Alfred Kienzle was transferred to Bourke. The official paperwork for Hally's internment states clearly that she was born in Australia, and that her parents were both British subjects in those days before Australian citizenship existed. The handwritten official internment documents for Hally and the four children record a special observation that 'As a natural born British subject will hold the government of the Commonwealth of Australia responsible and claim full damages for wrongful and illegal detention.' However neither family was ever compensated.

Conditions at Bourke were poor. Hally's sister Daisy recorded in her diary on arrival at Bourke 'once I was able to get some candles from a store nearby and we were able to see the state of the rooms we had to live in, we women just broke down... Filthy conditions.' They were given sacks of straw for bedding, rusty tin plates and mugs for eating and an old tin wash bucket for cooking. They had to wash their children under a tap in the backyard and cook on a stove made from four bricks and an iron bar. They had not been permitted to take any money with them from Fiji and Bourke meat and bread rations were often fly blown so they relied on fellow prisoners for food. Dysentery was rife and medical care scant.

After a German national, Georg Krafft, formerly German consul in Fiji, died of heatstroke in February 1918 the Swiss Consul, on behalf of Germany, objected to the Australian government about conditions at Bourke. As a result, in May 1918, families imprisoned at Bourke were moved to the Molonglo Concentration Camp at Fyshwick in the Federal Capital Territory (now the Australian Capital Territory). The camp comprised a series of wooden huts radiating out from an administrative centre, on a flat treeless plain. Built for around 3000 enemy aliens Britain planned to deport to Australia from China, the plan was dropped after German objections and threats of repercussions on British internees in Germany.

Conditions were generally better at Molonglo than at Bourke, as was their treatment under the camp leadership of former journalist Brigadier General Spencer Browne. Rations were fresher and more plentiful, but they suffered from the cold Canberra winter in poorly built wooden huts that kept out neither rain nor wind. They also suffered from the noise involved in living in wooden huts at close quarters with one another.

The prisoners created gardens, started a drama group and converted one of the huts to a theatre, developed an orchestra, established a school for the children and generally tried to make life as liveable as possible. Brigadier General Spencer Browne permitted occasional shopping trips to Queanbeyan for the prisoners and picnics by the Molonglo River. But still, they were prisoners and looked forward to freedom.

Although the war ended on 11 November 1918 the prisoners were not freed until 22 May 1919 when Hally was released on parole. At this point, Daisy Schoeffel wrote to Western Australian Member of Parliament the Hon. Henry Gregory appealing for his help to her family and her sister Hally's family avoiding deportation to Germany along with other 'enemy aliens'. In the letter to Gregory, Daisy told him: 'what hurt us more than all the insults and hardships we were forced to endure during our 2 years internment, was the fact that we should have to suffer all this at the hands of our own men and in our country!' She said they were made to feel like criminals and brought shame on their family. Hally was ill at the time but she endorsed the letter, saying that her sister had only mentioned a few of their sufferings: 'to describe them all she would have to write a book.' (NAA: CRS 457, Item 406/1; Fischer 1989).

In the letter Daisy also appealed to Gregory for Alfred Kienzle's release. He had been transferred to Holsworthy Concentration Camp, near Liverpool south-west of Sydney, where he was held until October. Most enemy aliens were either forcibly or voluntarily deported to Germany. The Kienzle and Schoeffel families avoided deportation through appeals to the authorities by them and their influential family in Western Australia. The Fiji Legislative Council had passed an ordinance in August 1919 prohibiting former enemy aliens from returning to the island. By October 1919 when Alfred was released, the family was destitute with nowhere to go. They spent time in a Salvation Army facility in central Sydney while Alfred sought work, a challenge because returned soldiers were favoured over enemy aliens, however he was eventually successful.

Both during and after interment, Hally suffered from the nervous disorders developed by many internees. On top of the trauma of imprisonment in her own country, she struggled with the four children of her husband's previous marriage, three of whom did not accept her. After release, the three elder children were sent to Germany to complete their education, easing the situation for her, and by the time they returned in 1925 they had matured and her health had improved a little, but she had been affected both mentally and physically by imprisonment.

It did not end there. In 1926 when Hally wished to buy a house for the family in Sydney, Military Intelligence forced her to withdraw from the sale contract. She was refused permission to purchase under the War Precautions (Land Transfer) Regulations because of her husband's German origin and the property's proximity to Botany Bay 2 miles away.

In 1933, with the rise of National Socialism in Germany and scarred by their experiences during World War One, Alfred and Hally changed their name by deed poll to Kingsley. They eventually moved to Papua where Bert and Wallace had established a business. She died there on 11 April 1956.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

We regret to announce the death of Mr. Frank Bateman, second son of Mr. John Bateman of Fremantle. The deceased gentleman, who had been ailing for some time, went over to Adelaide, not long ago, for the benefit of his health. Mrs. Frank Bateman had been apprised of the unfavourable change in the state of her husband's health and had intended proceeding to Adelaide by the 'South Australian', when the sad news of his death was received. The late Mr. Bateman was wellknown, and deservedly popular in the port, and the news of his death has been received with very general regret.

Eastern Districts Chronicle (York, WA : 1877 - 1927), Saturday 9 October 1886, page 3

We regret to hear of the death of the once captain of the Spinaway, Mr. Frank Bateman, which occurred at Adelaide on Sunday last. The deceased was well known, and was highly respected by those who had the pleasure of his acquaintance.

SHIPBUILDING AT FREMANTLE Seventy Years Ago.

To the Editor.

Sir,-In reference to Mr. Lynch's article dealing with the above I take the opportunity of correcting his remarks regarding the Spinaway. In the first place, the Spinaway was not built on the beach at Fremantle, but was built at Sunderland, England, in the early seventies for my late grandfather, John Bateman, and was brought out in charge of Captain Pringle. In the ship's crew was Mr. Robert Howson, the ship's carpenter, and that is how Mr. Howson became known throughout his life in Western Australia as "Spinaway Howson." It may also be of interest to state that the late Mr. Howson worked in the same shipyard with Sir Nevile Henderson's father, he also being a shipwright. My father Captain Frank Bateman took over the command of Spinaway after Captain Pringle and at that time my father was the youngest master mariner to secure his master's certificate at the age of 21 years. The Spinaway arrived in Western Australia as a full rigged ship, but for ease of handling she was converted to a schooner rig. From arrival and up to the late nineties the Spinaway was engaged on the coast and trading between Madagascar, Mauritius, Singapore, Hong Kong and Shanghai, taking away local products, including horses, and bringing back sugar and other necessary lines for the welfare of the young colony. The Spinaway was sold to a firm in Hong Kong and I understand she was lost in a typhoon off the China coast early in this century. The remarks regarding Captain Shaw are also incorrect. He was never in command of the Spinaway, and on my consulting Mr. Frank Shaw of the Public Works Department, Perth. who is a son of Captain Shaw, he advised that his father arrived here in 1866 in the Sea Nymph. The Sea Nymph was later wrecked off Woodman's Point. The Laughing Wave was built in 1869 by Jackson on the South Beach, Fremantle, and was fitted out by Captain Shaw on my grandfather's account. Regarding the Iris, Mr. Lynch has confused the Iris with the Spinaway. The Iris was built on the lines of the Spinaway by "Spinaway Howson" on the South Beach, Fremantle, in 1879 and this vessel also was fitted out by the late Captain Shaw. The Iris (not the Spinaway) was used for carrying sleepers to Geraldton on account of Mr. E. Keane, who was building the Geraldton-Northampton railway. Regarding the Iris, it is understood she was sold to Tasmanian owners and was lost off the Tamar River. The Laughing Wave was lost at Bunbury. Being moored to the jetty and a storm arising, she was stove in against the jetty and was consequently a total loss. Mr. Frank Shaw states that the Iris put up a record run for a sailing vessel, doing the trip from Cossack to Fremantle in 4 days 18 hours and on a return trip from Mauritius put up the record time of 20 days and also did the trip to Hong Kong in 21 days; which goes to show that local shipbuilders could build ships in competition with overseas shipbuilders.

-Yours, etc., M. J. BATEMAN. Perth.

Australian Women's Register (<https://nla.gov.au/nla.party-1624798>)

Australian-born Daisy Schoeffel, with her German-born but naturalised British husband and their two British born children, were deported from Fiji to Australia in November 1917 and interned in harsh conditions as enemy aliens first in the Bourke Concentration Camp, New South Wales and then moved to the Molonglo Concentration Camp at Fyshwick in the then Federal Capital Territory (now the Australian Capital Territory). Finally released in May 1919, Daisy wrote to a Western Australian Member of Parliament - Hon. Henry Gregory - expressing her anger and humiliation at the injustice of their treatment, the shame of their status and the depth and breadth of the suffering they experienced in the camps and pleaded against the forced deportation to Germany of her family. This letter provides the basis of this entry with relation to her imprisonment during World War One.

Fourth generation Australian, Daisy Mildred Pearse was the fifth of ten children born to Jessie Alice (nee Armstrong) and James Pearse in North Fremantle, Western Australia on 22 September 1885. James Pearse was a tanner whose shoe manufacturing business, later known as Pearse and Swan, evolved to be a major company in Western Australia. He served as a councillor for Fremantle 1883-1895, for North Fremantle 1895-1917 and as Mayor of North Fremantle from 1898-1901. None of this, however, protected his daughters Daisy and Hally, married to German cousins, from what lay ahead after the outbreak of World War One.

On a visit to New Zealand, Daisy met German-born businessman Alfred Emil Schoeffel who had worked for a German company in Fiji since 1908. They married at Johnston Memorial Congregational Church, Fremantle, on 19 November 1913. According to Robyn Kienzle in her book about Daisy's nephew Bert, 'The Architect of Kokoda', Daisy and Alfred married 'against furious opposition from her family' (p. 12), however the report of the large society wedding in the West Australian in November 1913, suggests the family may have come around to the marriage ('Social Notes', 1913, p. 10).

The couple initially lived in Levuka, Fiji where Daisy gave birth to three children - Kenton in 1914, Max in 1916. She later gave birth to Rex in Australia in 1924.

Alfred Schoeffel was naturalised a British subject in May 1914 and nothing immediately changed for the family after the outbreak of war in August the same year. The Schoeffels continued to live their lives as before. Back in Australia, Daisy's brother Kenton Pearse enlisted with the Australian Imperial Force (AIF) and saw action in France. Several of her cousins also served with the AIF. Daisy's father, James Pearse had a significant contract producing leather boots for the Australian forces, and her brother Alfred George Pearse (b. 1881) represented the Master Tanners' Association on the Western Australian advisory committee appointed by Prime Minister Billy Hughes under the war precautions leather industries regulations that ensured Commonwealth control over the manufacture of leather goods including boots. Daisy's family was thoroughly Australian but this made no difference when in 1917 the notorious German naval commander and sea raider Count Felix von Luckner evaded the British Royal Navy and ended up in Fiji, where the local community responded with xenophobic hysteria. Von Luckner and his small crew surrendered to British authorities and were shipped to New Zealand where they were interned for the duration of the war, but in the meantime the politics of fear had taken hold in Fiji and all German nationals in Fiji were deported, whether naturalised British or not.

Recovering at home from surgery to remove gallstones and her appendix, Daisy was rounded up by Fijian authorities with her family and her sister Hally and her stepchildren. All their property was seized, including their homes, and the two families forced onto the SS Atua, sailing from Suva on 1 November 1917. After travelling in abominable conditions under armed guard with little food and no washing facilities for the eight-day voyage, they were put on a train for Bourke, New South Wales from Sydney and not permitted to make contact with their family in Western Australia. In a letter Daisy wrote to Western Australian Member of Parliament Henry Gregory in 1919, and endorsed by her sister Hally, she described their arrival at Bourke where they were paraded to the empty former Empire Hotel: 'Once I was able to get some candles from a store nearby and we were able to see the state of the rooms we had to live in, we women just broke down - I wished to God I could die and my babies with me! (NAA: CRS 457, Item 406/1; Fischer 1989).' The Schoeffels and Kienzles were given straw sacks to sleep on and 'filthy dirty rusty tin plates' and mugs and a tin bucket to cook in. The authorities gave them no respite and neither did the weather. Having arrived in November, daytime temperatures were 40 degrees in shade and just as it began to cool down at 7 p.m. the prisoners were forced inside where the heat had built up during the day. Conditions were filthy; the women had to wash their children under a tap in the backyard and cook on a stove made from four bricks and an iron bar. Rations of bread and meat were often flyblown so they had to buy fresh food from local stores but as they had not been permitted to bring money from Fiji, they relied on the generosity of the other German prisoners. Many of the prisoners contracted dysentery, including Daisy and her baby son Max; they received little medical attention and Max was eventually admitted to Bourke hospital when his condition worsened. Daisy wrote of this time: 'Those next 3 weeks I can't write about. I went through hell and only thank God that I kept my reason.' The prisoners were only permitted to write two letters a week of 150 words each and these were censored so she was unable to appeal to her family in Western Australia for help.

When the German consul in Fiji, George Krafft died of heatstroke at Bourke in February 1918 and shortly afterwards an interned family's cottage burnt down in the heat, families at Bourke were shipped to the then Federal Capital Territory. After a long train journey they found themselves at the Molonglo Concentration Camp, Fyshwick where Daisy wrote 'Oh, the difference in the treatment here was very marked indeed and we all said if only we had been sent here in the first place! The officers and men were all very kind... and were most sympathetic to my sister and I and could never understand how we could be there.' Under the leadership of the respected former journalist Brigadier-General Reginald Spencer Browne the regime was more gentle. Daisy described that 'everything here was made as easy for us as discipline allowed and compared to Bourke our rations were good and plentiful.' There was, however, one drawback with Molonglo - they were in a camp on a dusty open plain, in poorly built wooden barracks that let in the rain, wind and noise from the other internees. Daisy wrote that there was constant noise all around: 'at my hut I could hear French, German, Chinese and English all day and half the night.' Her husband became seriously ill and was bed-bound for four months while Daisy became so rundown she had three and more fainting fits per day. Her physical and mental health suffered for the rest of her life. After their release on 22 May 1919, Daisy and her sister Hally were both concerned that they would be deported to Germany as enemy aliens with their families. The British and Fijian governments supported the deportation of enemy aliens and from August 1919 the Fiji Legislative Council prohibited former enemy aliens from landing on the island. The Australian government deported 6,150 people who were deemed enemy aliens. Of these, 5,414 people had been interned, the rest were family members or those ordered by the Defence Department to leave the country. Of the more than one thousand people who appealed to the Commonwealth Alien Board against deportation, only 306 were successful including 179 naturalised or native born Australians. Daisy and her sister and their husbands were relieved when Gregory's intervention on their behalf to the Prime Minister and the Governor General apparently contributed to their deportation orders being rescinded.

Daisy and her family initially lived in Sydney. They were eventually permitted to return to Fiji in 1920 but spent only a brief time there before returning to Sydney where Alfred was again naturalised in May 1926. They lived in Turramurra, Sydney before taking up farming at Horningsea Park, near Liverpool, New South Wales sometime before 1933. Daisy and Alfred were living in Mathoura, in the New South Wales Riverina until she died at her son Max's home Chelsworth Park in nearby Echuca, Victoria on 14 January 1969. She was buried at Mathoura Cemetery on 17 January 1969.

Daisy had written to Gregory in 1919: 'what hurt us more than all the insults and hardships we were forced to endure during our 2 years internment, was the fact that we should have to suffer all this at the hands of our own men and in our country!' She said they were made to feel like criminals and brought shame on their family. Daisy blamed Australia, writing that had Australia refused Fiji's request to intern them, no other country would have done so. 'Fiji approached New Zealand first of all and they refused to intern naturalized men let alone British women!' (NAA: CRS 457, Item 406/1; Fischer 1989). According to later Schoeffel family stories, Daisy did not talk about the experience. As was so often the case, shame inhibited people from telling stories of their internment. Her letter to Gregory, published as Appendix 1 in Gerhard Fischer's Enemy aliens: internment and the home front experience in Australia, 1914-1920 (1989), powerfully relates her experience in her own words. It proved an eye-opener to her grandchildren and other relatives and is a tragic illustration of a lesser known suffering caused by war.

Milk inquiry evidence

Position Becoming Desperate

Alfred Emil Schoeffel, . dairy-farmer, of Liverpool, said the position of the dairy-farmer was now becoming desperate, owing to one of the worst droughts In history. If these conditions lasted another two months the outlook for the bulk of the farmers would be hopeless. "Only a small percentage of the dairy-farmers within 50 miles of Sydney are able to pay for the feed of their cattle out of the milk cheques they receive. The farms are kept going by storekeepers, . produce merchants, money-lenders, and others," he declared. He doubted whether, if the books were examined by a qualified accountant, any dairy-farmer would show a profit over the last few years, To ensure better prices for the farmer, he advocated the block delivery system. The vendor, he pointed out, always had a definite margin, irrespective of seasonal conditions and the cost of producing milk.

WEDDING.

PEARSE-SCHOEFFEL

Quite the smartest wedding of the year took place at the Johnston Memorial Church last week, when Miss Daisy Mildred Pearse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Pearse, of Ivy Home, North Fremantle, was wedded to Mr. Alfred Emil Schoeffel, of Levuka, Fiji son of Mr. an Mrs G Schoeffel, Geislingen, Wurttemberg. long before the hour fixed for the ceremony the church and prescincts were thronged with well wishers of the young pair, in addition to the numerous invited guests. Great interest was taken locally in the event, as the bride was born in the town and her ancestors were among the pioneers of the colony, the name of Pearse being associated with Fremantle from the earliest days of settlement to the present day. The church was prettily decorated for the service, the chief feature being a symetrical arch of marguerite daisies and fern, from which hung a hand-some wedding bell composed of the bride's name, flowers. The pastor of the church, Rev. Wright, officiated, and the service was choral in honor of the bride, who was formerly a member of the choir. Mr. Max Rutter presided at the organ. As the bridal party entered the church, the old familiar hymn, "The Voice that, breathed o'er Eden," was sung, and the bride, who was given away by her father, was greatly ad-mired in her charming, graceful gown of the richest duchesse satin. The skirt, perfectly cut, was absolutely plain, and the little corsage, from which fell a sweeping train, was clouded in most delicate silk Brussels lace, part of which was lightly veiled in ninon, sewn with pearls. She wore a very becoming spray of orange blossom (worn over thirty years ago by an aunt), over which fell in graceful folds a most exquisite veil of handmade lace, the gift of her sisters, Misses Hallett and Nellie. A beautiful shower bouquet completed the toilet, which was signally becoming to the handsome wearer. She had a trio of pretty brides-maids. Misses Nellie, Doris, and Margery (sisters), and they looked sweet and dainty in their dresses of white crepe de chine over charmeuse. Each dress showed the new frills, either on basque or ornamenting the skirt, and they were finished with beautiful lace. Their market-garden hats were of French leghorn, softly lined with pink and finished with gold tissue and clusters of tiny roses and forget-me-nots, and they carried pale pink bouquets. The duties of best man were carried out by Mr. Timperley, and those of groomsmen by Mr. Alf Evans and Mr. Ken. Pearse. During the signing of the papers Miss Doris Pearse sang "Love's Coronation" with wonderful feeling and charm, delighting everybody with her lovely fresh, rich notes. Mrs. Pearse (mother) was gowned in saxe blue charmeuse with over-dress of richly-embroidered black ninon, black tulle hat with lancer feather and tiny rosebuds, bouquet of crimson roses and carnations. Mrs. Geo. Pearse (sister) wore a smart dress of silk-embroidered ninon de soie, with becoming Parisian hat in soft coral tones. Miss Hallett Pearse (sister) was in a dainty dress of white embroidered voile, with stylish coat effect, on which was seen enpiements of exquisite lace, hat of apricot satin veiled in ninon, with handsome black feather. Mrs. J. J. Higham wore lime-green broche voile and hat en suite. Mrs. Geo. Pearse (aunt) had on an exquisite toilet of pale apricot charmeuse, with overdress of beautiful lace and hat of shaded apricot and grey feathers. Mrs. Henderson (aunt) wore black satin. Mrs. H. Higham was in black crepe de soie with handsome hat showing graceful feathers. Mrs F. Bateman (aunt) wore a smart black and white costume. Mrs. S. Pearse also wore black relieved with white. At the conclusion of the service, Mr. and Mrs. Pearse held a reception at their charming residence Ivy Home, where they welcomed many friends. The bridal party made a charming group as they stood in the morning room, surrounded with a wealth of flowers and where the bride and bridegroom received the good wishes of their friends. Everything was so bright and joyous, as such an occasion should be. An immense marquee was erected on one of the beautiful mossy lawns, and here everyone gathered to partake of Mr. and Mrs. Pearse's hospitality. The scene in the tent was one of distinct charm, owing to the splendid decorations which were carried out with very artistic skill. Festoons, or rather ropes of foliage, brightened with clusters of scarlet flowers were traced all around the structure, and completely outlined the form of the marquee, colored electric lights gleamed from rich dark foliage and the air was fragrant with the scents of various flowers from the surrounding garden. The table at which the bridal party sat was daintily arranged with daises and white carnations, mingled with maiden hair fern, and small tables were dotted all round each holding a bowl of flowers. Refreshments of the daintiest description were served, during which the toasts usual to the occasion were honored, and subsequently the bride and bridegroom left for Ravenswood where the honeymoon is being spent. Mrs. Schoeffel travelled in a smart coat and skirt of sponge cloth with blue facings, hat en suite. The presents were very numerous and valuable and included a handsome oak chest of silver service for twelve persons, the gift of the bride-groom's parents, who had had the initials of the bride D.S. engraved on every article the chest contained. Bridegroom to bride: Diamond ring and silver bag. Bride to bridegroom : Gold sleeve links. Bridegroom to bridesmaids: Gold Nellie Stewart bracelet and silver bags. Mrs. Pearse mother) : The whole of the house linen. Many valuable cheques were also received. The "Do-drop-in" Club has issued invitations for their 17th Social evening, to take place Saturday, 27th inst., at the Guild Hall, North Fremantle, this being the final dance of the season. All preparations are being carried out by skilful hands, and an enjoyable time is anticipated.

SOCIAL NOTES (By "Adrienne.")

My Fremantle correspondent writes:- Johnston Memorial Church was the scene of a very interesting wedding recently, when Miss Doris Minnie Pearse, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Pearse, of Ormesby, Bindaring-parade, Cottesloe, was married to Mr. W. J. A. Higham, son of the late Mr. H. Higham and Mrs. Higham, of Nanutarra, Alexandra-road, East Fremantle. The church was crowded with guests and wellwishers, and girlfriends had decorated the interior very beautifully for the occasion. A wedding bell hung from a big centre arch, which was composed of asparagus and sweet peas, and smaller arches were used to mark off guests' seats. White doves added conspicuously to the decorative scheme. The service was solemnised by the pastor of the church, Rev. Llewellyn Williams, and Mr. Chandler presided at the organ, which pealed a bright welcome to the bride as she entered, with her father, who gave her away. She looked lovely in her dainty frock of white silk net with smartly draped frills from waist to hem, giving a waterfall effect. The low-cut corsage was softly swathed in the form of a high belt. Her veil of exquisite Venetian point (kindly lent by her cousin, Mrs. D. Francis) was worn capwise, and held with a tiny lace chin strap, caught on either side with a spray of orange blossom. She wore a string of pearls, clasped with diamonds, and carried a sheaf of Australian bride lilies, both gifts of the bridegroom. Four maids were in attendance-Misses Margery Pearse (sister), Ella Hollis, Gwen Turton, and Mollie Turton. The two first-named wore dainty frocks of bright vieux rose silk net, outlined with handmade flowers in pale blue. They wore large black tulle hats, with tulle chon, and carried old world posies of pink roses and sweet peas, veiled in pink tulle. The Misses Turton wore graceful frocks of white net, made with tiny little hemstitched frills, and black tulle hats, carrying similar posies to the other maids of honour. The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Jack Higham, as best man, and the duties of groomsman were carried out v Mr. Ben Pearse. During the service Mr. Hugh Torrance sang "Beloved, it is Morn." A reception took place later on at the home of the bride's parents, when Mr. and Mrs. Pearse welcomed a big gathering of old friends. Mrs. Pearse received in a handsome gown of black gaze-de-soie, with rich silk fringe and a touch of gold stitchery, black and gold hat, and bouquet of shaded gold roses Mrs. Higham, mother of the bridegroom wore a smart black crepe-de-chine with fringe and chenille appliqué, and black hat with aeroplane lace wings. The house was filled with beautiful sweet peas. During a dainty wedding supper, the toasts usual to the occasion were honoured, and subsequently the bride and bridegroom left for the country districts. Mrs. Higham travelled in a stylish coat and skirt of Jersey suiting in the new taupe shade, opening over a blouse of pale blue georgette. A smart, close-fitting hat had a lace drape over clusters of tiny pink rosebuds. After the departure of the bride and bridegroom in a shower of confetti, the younger guests assembled in the ballroom, and spent a few happy hours dancing to Mrs. Miller's gay music.
